Internet Safety

Katie Greer (KL Greer Consulting) led discussions with students and parents this week on the topic of staying safe on the internet. Our children are online more than ever before while using gaming systems, apps, and more. Mrs. Greer taught students that people on the internet are not their friends if they do not know them personally. All games and apps have settings that let you play with people you know. She explained the importance of digital footprints and that deleting something is like throwing a blanket over a person's head who is still in the room with you. Just because you covered them doesn't mean they are not there.

Her message to parents was that we need to model good social media behavior for our children. In general, children spend 44 hours or more per week online. She suggests setting clear expectations with your children for technology use including texting. Parents should spot check their children's text messages, apps, logs, friends, followers, and subscriber lists. She urges parents to have a list of their children's login information which is crucial in emergency situations. Mrs. Greer also suggests setting a time in the evening when all technology devices are turned in, such as the dining room table, in an effort to minimize online time and keep tabs on who your children are communicating with. That is not easily done when they have 24 hour access to their phones.

We encourage you to take a look at Mrs. Greer's website. There are directions for how to set parental controls, suggestions for apps that really help your children in their growth and development, and much more.

Thank you, PTA, for providing this education for our students, parents and staff.

Staff Spotlight ~ Sewell, Krutka, Woodfin, Valenta, Sydow

We would like to publicly thank those staff members who worked so hard to plan activities for our students during the Katie Greer meeting on Tuesday night. Mrs. Krutka (librarian), Mrs. Woodfin (library para), and Mrs. Valenta (art) planned four stations for students to rotate through. Mrs. Sewell (5th grade) and Mrs. Sydow (Harpool) came Tuesday evening to work with the National Junior Honor Society students who oversaw the stations. These staff members are greatly appreciated. It was a successful evening.
